Data Dimensions Releases Video of Core Service Offerings

JANESVILLE, Wisconsin, February 18, 2009 - Data Dimensions, a leader in providing business process outsourcing services, releases video to promote core service offerings.

Experts agree in today's challenging business environment the reality of a firm's survival is based upon its relentless pursuit of a business model that ties together financial targets with growth strategies. In these challenging economic times, it is imperative for professionals to understand that business processes often represent a significant portion of costs to their organizations.

For over 25 years, Data Dimensions' most fundamental reason for existence is to provide customized solutions that help businesses streamline and reduce or eliminate manual processes, reduce costs, and mitigate risk, while enabling clients to focus on their core competencies. By providing the people and technology, Data Dimensions designs, models, executes, monitors, and optimizes business processes.

The video serves to show organizations ways in which Data Dimensions promotes business effectiveness and efficiency through optimization of business processes. Core competency options allow businesses to choose from a complete, end-to-end document management workflow or al a carte style services allowing selection of outsourcing in specific, key areas of need.

"We continually strive to bring added value to our clients. As such, we have built and evolved a robust suite of service offerings that increasingly become among our core services. The video allows those who are interested in business process outsourcing an insider's view of what Data Dimensions provides without the need to leave their desk," said Jon Boumstein, President and CEO of Data Dimensions. "Today with the struggling economy, more and more businesses are tightening their traveling budgets and we believe the video is one way we aid businesses in their research efforts.”
